At So Fare Films we produce human interest stories about people you've never met from places you've never been to. So Fare Films is an award-winning production company and film education program in Rome, Italy that makes compelling documentary films and educational materials that broaden perspectives. What sets us apart is our unique ability to bring together a diverse team of emerging international filmmakers from various countries, backgrounds, and skill levels to collaborate on every project.

Our operations are based in Rome with an infrastructure that accommodates collaboration from multiple locations and countries, allowing for more team diversity and professional consultation opportunities. Together, the So Fare team members "learn by doing," applying their storytelling skills to inspire thoughtful, transformative conversations on complex social topics.
